

Topic ClosedIranian Shiah Mullahs allow Sex change!!!

Post Reply Post Reply

Page

1

123 4>

Author Message Topic Rating Rate Topic Topic Search Topic Search Topic Options
Topic Options

Sawtul Khilafah View Drop Down

Senior Member

Senior Member

Avatar

Joined: 20 July 2006

Location: Peru

Status: Offline

Points: 623

Direct Link To This Post Topic: Iranian Shiah Mullahs allow Sex change!!!

Posted: 14 July 2007 at 11:16am

http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=1_LI6fXFUtA

The Iranian Government only uses Islam as a mask while allowing the most disgusting and evil things, including sex change!

Back to Top

Sponsored Links

Back to Top

abuayisha View Drop Down

Senior Member

Senior Member

Avatar

Joined: 05 October 1999

Status: Offline

Points: 5046

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 14 July 2007 at 3:35pm

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/programmes/newsnight/4115535.stm>

Back to Top

Israfil View Drop Down

Senior Member

Senior Member

Avatar

Joined: 08 September 2003

Status: Offline

Points: 3984

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 15 July 2007 at 9:13am

Why is this disgusting and evil? This is their human right. not everyone is normal in the brain like you Sawtul. God didn't make everyone the same either. Remember, there is a possibility that their neurochemistry is different than the "average" heterosexual, "normal" male.

Back to Top

rami View Drop Down

Moderator Group

Moderator Group

Avatar

Male

Joined: 01 March 2000

Status: Offline

Points: 2549

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 15 July 2007 at 1:26pm

Bi ismillahir rahmanir raheem

assalamu alaikum

no matter what there illness is it is haram to mutilate the body and it is haram to be homosexual.

the argument of wrong chemistry is premature and only a hypothesis by islamic stadards, hormone supliments are readily available.

Rasul Allah (sallah Ilahu alaihi wa sallam) said: "Whoever knows himself, knows his Lord" and whoever knows his Lord has been given His gnosis and nearness.

Back to Top

Sawtul Khilafah View Drop Down

Senior Member

Senior Member

Avatar

Joined: 20 July 2006

Location: Peru

Status: Offline

Points: 623

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 15 July 2007 at 4:01pm

Read the Qur'an, Surah Nisa verse 119 where Satan says: "and assuredly I will incite them to alter Allah's creation"

Back to Top

Israfil View Drop Down

Senior Member

Senior Member

Avatar

Joined: 08 September 2003

Status: Offline

Points: 3984

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 15 July 2007 at 5:01pm

Rami,

You would be mistaken to think that the gender-identity disorder is as simple as popping a few testosterone and estrogen pills in your mouth and simply awaiting their effects. Because this is my field of study (along with Philosophy of course) I think I have more of an in-depth knowledge of neuroscience than you sir. You see, Several regions in the human brain differ in organization between men and women. For example, distinct cell groups in the preoptic and anterior hypothalamic area are larger, and the suprachiasmatic nucleus contains more vasoactive intestinal polypeptide-immunoreactive cells in young men than in young women.

Clear anatomical sex differences have also been described in the human bed nucleus of the stria terminalis (BST). The darkly staining posteromedial component of the BST (BST-dspm) and the central subdivision of the BST (BSTc) are both larger in men than in women (See Ref: Allen and Gorski, 1990 ; Zhou et al., 1995 ; Kruijver et al., 2000).

As you can see, differences in the size of the human BSTc have been related to the gender identity disorder transsexuality, in which subjects voice the strong feeling of being born in the wrong sex. In male-to-female transsexuals, the BSTc was similar in size to that of control women, whereas in the only female-to-male transsexual studied so far, the BSTc was similar in size to that of control men (See Ref: Swaab and Hofman, 1995 ; Zhou et al., 1995 ; Kruijver et al., 2000). Some studies show sex difference in BSTc volume only in adulthood which suggests that marked sex-dependent organizational changes in brain structure are not limited to early development but may extend into adulthood.

The following I retrieved from the UCLA school department of neuroscience shows a diagram of how complex the issue of transsexuality is. Basically this schematic is a picture of the BST or, bed nucleus of the stria terminalis:

image 1

Figure 1: Schematic frontal section through two subdivisions of the bed nucleus of the stria terminalis (BST) that are hatched. III: third ventricle; AC: anterior commissure; BSTc and BSTv: central and ventral subdivisions of the BST; FX: fornix; IC: internal capsule; LV: lateral ventricle; NBM: nucleus basalis of Meynert; OT: optic tract; PVN: paraventricular nucleus; SDN: sexually dimorphic nucleus; SON: supraoptic nucleus.

Even though there is a difference in size in the BST in the male-to-female transsexuals, studies show that the study of the varying size of the BST does not explain hormonal levels. In actuality, considered together with information from animals, some studies have proven the hypothesis that gender identity alterations may develop as a result of an altered interaction between the development of the brain and sex hormones.

Edited by Israfil

Back to Top

Israfil View Drop Down

Senior Member

Senior Member

Avatar

Joined: 08 September 2003

Status: Offline

Points: 3984

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 15 July 2007 at 5:15pm

Muslim Scholars are not neuroscientist and because I have found many Muslim Scholars to not have an extensive background in Neuroscience it would be valid to say that their argument of sin is not legitimate to warrant condemnation since their explanation is solely religiously based. The physical and molecular level of the brain is more complex as you say Rami, we have medication readily available however, that does not always work. You cannot alter the physical composition and cellular structure of the brain simply by altering its neurochemistry because even with medication it does not always mean solution.

For instance we have medication to treat drug withdrawals by inducing a particular neurotransmitter (i.e. Serotonin, Dopamine etc) however most individuals because of long term drug use have altered their neurochemistry therefore (or some` type of predisposition), will be on medication for the rest of their lives. Similarly with transsexuals since there is nothing that concretely shows the direct link to Gender-Identity Disorder (except through studies of correlation) we can only speculate through behavioral studies from animals.

From a legal aspect you cannot ban sex change to curb a physiological disorder, you are simply masking the reality from your environment. You also cannot change a person simply by being like a Christian Evangelist and thumping the Qur'an at them, especially if their neurochemistry is altered. Simply reading, meditating on the Qur'an is, unfortunately in this case not enough. This same argument can be said for being homosexual.

Sawtul, your argument is moot and shows no relationship between what Satan says and what you posted. Your opinion (and Rami's) are simply opinions based upon limited understanding on neuropsychology and mostly on religious opinion on transsexuality. Every individual has a right to do as they wish to their body because, it is human right. To say "no, you cannot do this or that" is to curb the "God given right" which is our supposed freewill. To keep humans from doing such is indeed an infringement on our human rights. No religious Scholar or any society should force someone to be what they don't feel.

Now, I'm not knowledgeable about Iranian laws but I'm sure their laws are in connection with Islamic Law (Shari'ah) so I'm sure they have laws against public indency of some sort but this is different than transsexuality. Changing one's gender is neither indecent or evil as the former does not offend the public and the latter does not harm the public. This is merely a personal matter which only God knows. I say, leave people alone and let God decide in the end.

Edited by Israfil

Back to Top

Abu Mujahid View Drop Down

Guest Group

Guest Group

Joined: 14 April 2007

Status: Offline

Points: 264

Direct Link To This Post Posted: 16 July 2007 at 4:51am

Israfil,

Women who has sex out of marriage are not immoral, Athiest can be pious. And now homos/trans or gender change are human rights issues. What is Next?

The current commercial gender change like that Mayor man did has nothing to do with gender correction. Nor it has any legal stand in sane world let alone in Islam.

UCLA or most other medical institutions claims are nothing but pure gender altering which Islam has prohibited.

Abu Mujahid

Edited by Abu Mujahid